A STORY WITH A FLAW.

How a Hungarian Statesman Relieved Himself of People Who Bored Him. Of the Hungarian statesman, Franris Deak, it is related that he used to at the door of the smoking room rid himself of troublesome visitors by teiling them the following story:

Once, when in Paris, Napoleon I paid a visit to a hospital for old soldiers. Here he perceived among the rest a man who had lost one of his arms, and he entered into conversation with him.

""Where did you lose your arm?" asked the emperor.

"At Waterloo, your majesty." " Then, no doubt, you curse the emperor and your country every time you look at your mutilated limb?" Said personal property is taken as the property of said defaulant and is appraised at its sum of said and will be said to satisfy an, 'for the emperor and my native land I would readily sacrifice my

> "But the soldier, anxious to prove that he was in earnest, immediately drew a saber from its sheath and lopped off his other arm."

Here Deak would pause and fix a penetrating look on his visitor. "Well, what have you to say of such a man and such an action?" "A most sublime act of self-sacrifice! A truly noble character!" This was the style of reply invariably

"But the story has one flaw," he would gravely add.

"What is that, pray?" "It is simply impracticable. How could a one-armed man contrive to cut off his only remaining arm?"

HUSKING BEE SPORT.

How the Forefathers Celebrated the Joyous Autumnal Season.

A story is told of the husking-bee deviltry in the pioneer days of Dexter. Captain Small, one of the first-comers, after he had grown to the dignity of having a big barn, gave a husking to which a large, merry party gathered. While the supper was progressing, arm. and the coast was clear, some of the "boys" drove one of the captain's steers into the barn floor, and, attaching a rope to him lifted him up over the high beams to the top of the haymow. They were so spry about it that the joke was not discovered. The steer was missed, of course, and a search of all the surrounding tion with her dressmaker. But the country was made without success. The animal was given up for lost, when one day, a week after the husk- stranger. ing, the captain was in his barn and pole. Looking up, there was the missing steer gazing calmly down at him over sharply: the high beam. Such was the sport the daddies had in their young days. Modern huskings are more prosaic.

Do Not Sleep on the Laft Side. There is little doubt that an imwalls upon the moriband stranger, mense number of persons habitually sleep on the left side, and those who do so can never, it is said, be strictly healthy. It is the most prolific cause of nightmare, and also of the unpleasant taste in the mouth on arising in the morning. All food enters and leaves the stomach on the right side, and hence sleeping on the left side soon after eating involves a sort of pumping operation, which is anything but conductve to sound repose. The action of the heart is also seriously interfered with and the lungs unduly compressed. Hence it is best to cultivate the habit of always sleeping on the right side, although Sandow and other strong men are said to invariably sleep on their backs.

Too Much Economy. To economize time is a sensible thing, and yet there are occasions when it brings trouble, as in the case of a Mr. Johnson. Mr. Johnson's lawyer, calling one day, found Mrs. Johnson alone and walking about in a state of violent excitement. He Berard's case was hopeless. M. de asked what was the matter. Her Loyaumont seized the physician's only answer was that her husband was "a villain." After a time, she added, with some besitation: "Why, I have discovered all the love-letters he sent me were the very same he sent to his first wife."
